PRESIDENT COOLIDGE WILL HAVE MAJORITY OF MORE THAN 100 IN ELECTORAL COLLEGE

The Conditions of Fishermen on the Canadian-Labrador is Now Much Improved Many French Villages are Suffering From Heavy Floods

France Pleased

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The Republican victory in the U.S.A. election is seen by La Temps today as a popular reaction against "tendencies regarded as dangerous to the Constitutional regime." The newspaper says the election of Calvin Coolidge as President and Charles G. Dawes as Vice-President, assures continuance of the recent United States policy. "In the direction of more active co-operation with Europe, even if it be only by private means for the solution of the problem of peace." The Intransigent, commenting upon the election of Mr. Dawes, says: "America owed this homage to the author of the Dawes Plan." Most of the papers comment guardedly on the election, apparently withholding more definite opinions until the result of the election is absolutely certain.

Republican Leading

MASSACHUSETTS, Nov. 5.—A close race between Senator David I. Walsh, Democrat, and Speaker Frederick H. Gillet, of the National House of Representatives, for Senator, was the outstanding feature of the election in Massachusetts. The outcome was still uncertain today with Gillet leading by 7,871 votes in returns from 1162 precincts out of 1432 in the State. Coolidge carried his home state by a plurality over Davis which on the returns from the same precincts had reached 310,337. There will be at least two women in the new state house of representatives, M. Sylvia Donaldson Republican, being re-elected from the tenth Plymouth district, and Harriet Russell Hart, Republican, being elected in the 13th Essex district.

Returns of Electoral College

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—As returns steadily today the votes in the Electoral College, either by definite concession of rival managers, or indicated trend, were classed this way for the three principal contenders: Coolidge—California, 13; Colorado, 6; Connecticut, 7; Delaware, 3; Illinois, 29; West Virginia, 8; Wyoming, 3; Indiana, 15; Iowa, 13; Kansas, 10; Kentucky, 13; Maine, 6; Maryland, 8; Massachusetts, 18; Michigan, 15; Missouri, 18; Nebraska, 8; New Hampshire, 4; New Jersey, 14; New York, 45; Ohio, 24; Oregon, 5; Pennsylvania, 38; Rhode Island, 5; Utah, 4; Vermont, 4; Washington, 7.—Total, 343. Davis—Alabama, 12; Arkansas, 9; Florida, 6; Georgia, 14; Louisiana, 10; Mississippi, 10; North Carolina, 12; Oklahoma, 10; South Carolina, 9; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 20; Virginia, 12.—Total, 130. La Follette—Wisconsin, 13.—Total, 13.

Consulate Will Close

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 5.—All Mexican consulates in Canada and the other British Dominions have been ordered closed beginning November 29. The order was issued today by the Minister of Foreign Affairs in carrying out the policy to sever commercial relations with Great Britain, which suspended all relations with Mexico after the recent withdrawal at the request of Mexico, of H. S. Cunard Cummins, the British charge d'affaires.

Coleman Dupont to Senate. Republican nominees of state office elected. RHODE ISLAND—Coolidge plurality more than 42,000. Republicans elected full slate of state offices, re-elected two Republican and one Democratic Congressmen and elected Senator Metcalf. Republican. Republicans increased majorities in both houses of state legislature. MAINE—Coolidge majority more than 95,000. Nearly complete returns give Coolidge 138,999; Davis, 41,265; LaFollette, 11,299. VERMONT—National state of Coolidge gave him four to one majority; elected Republican Governor and two Republican Congressmen. NEW HAMPSHIRE — Republican landslide gave Coolidge 37,322 plurality; increased Republican majorities in state legislature; regained Governorship and a seat in the Federal Congress for the Republican party and elected Henry W. Both branches of the State Legislature will be controlled by Republicans. PENNSYLVANIA—Recorded largest Republican plurality in the history of the State, Coolidge majority being estimated at 900,000. Returns indicate Republican victories in 34 of the 36 Congressional seats. All six seats formerly held by Democrats, went Republican. Opposition was recorded to a proposal to revise the State Constitution. NEW JERSEY—President Coolidge's majority of 264,124 led the ticket, of which United States Senator Walter E. Edge, was continued in office and the part membership in the State Congressional delegation was increased from six to ten. Republican gains were apparent in the membership of the House of Assembly of the State. MARYLAND — Coolidge won the State of Maryland by a plurality of approximately 9,000. Political observers

Votes On Amendments Coolidge Has Big Majority

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—(Canadian Press) —With returns almost completed, the citizens of Massachusetts had voted on four proposed constitutional amendments as follows: Whether the state shall favor an amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting the employment of children in industry, yes, 186,985; no, 505,238. Whether there shall be a state tax of two cents a gallon on all gasoline sold, the proceeds to be used for the maintenance of highways, yes, 203,834; no, 406,336.

Coolidge Thanks American Voters

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—President Coolidge having received a vote of confidence from the American voters, today expressed his simple thanks in a statement which he read to the newspaper men. He said, I can only express my simple thanks to all those who have contributed to this result and plainly acknowledge that it has been brought to pass through the work of a Divine providence, of which I am but one instrument. Such powers as I have I dedicate to the service of all my countrymen.

Printer Dead

MONTREAL, Nov. 4.—James Drury, for many years organizer of the Eastern district of Canada and Newfoundland for the International Typographical Union died at his home in Outremont yesterday, after a year's illness, at the age of 61.

ers attributed the Davis defeat in this state to the LaFollette vote. In the Congressional election all five of the incumbent representatives, two Republicans and three Democrats were elected.

CONNECTICUT — Total plurality for Coolidge in Connecticut reached 145,215 today. Pluralities for State ticket went as high as 125,394 for Lieut. Governor Hiram Bingham, Republican nominee for Governor. Five Republican Congressmen were elected.

Big Theft

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 5 — Henry Agate vice-president and traveling representative of a New York jewelry concern, reported to the police shortly after midnight that gems valued at approximately $200,000 had been stolen from his room in a local hotel. The police said it probably was the largest theft of the kind ever reported in the south.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—John W. Davis today congratulated President Coolidge on his election to the Presidency.

Rheims Flooded

RHEIMS, France, Nov. 5.—Heavy floods of the past few days in the city of Rheims and vicinity have assumed alarming proportions. Eight hundred families have abandoned homes in this city. Several villages have been evacuated and cut off from outside communications, and a number of leading roads in the district are impassable.

Cold Snap In Canada

WINNIPEG, Nov. 5.—The entire Canadian West today was in the grip of cold, bleak weather. Heavy snow falls according to reports, had been fairly general throughout the southern portions of the prairie provinces during the past 24 hours, while in other districts low temperature prevailed.

Will Abolish Titles

PEKING, Nov. 5.—A new agreement, imposed today by the De Facto military government of Peking, provides that titles be abolished in the household of the deposed Manchu dynasty, and that the imperial allowance be reduced from $400,000,000 annually to $500,000 with certain additional sums for the establishment of factories for Manchu retainers to work in.

Condition Improved

QUEBEC, Nov. 5.—In contrast to the unfortunate conditions which prevailed a year ago among the fishermen at Old Fort Bay, Harrington Bay, Fox River and other places along the Gaspe and Labrador coasts, when the families there were in danger of starvation through the failure of the fishing season, word has reached the city that the fishermen have lately met with considerable success with hand-line operations. Only about five or six families have been found in meagre circumstances, and these will be looked after by the missionaries. Most favorable conditions prevailed in all other sections.

A Noble Woman's Recompense

CHAPTER XXIX.

Bygone Days.

"Come along," said Lord St. Clare, "shall we have another bout of tennis, Miss Kyra?" But Kyra—wonderful to relate—refused, and preferred to take a seat under the trees and look on. Charlie and Percy were soon busy looking after their guests; all were engaged, and all had apparently forgotten her. Was it unnatural that she should be tempted to return to that old oak room, that she should succumb to it. The stained glass window, reaching to the ground, had been left open, and, unobserved, she passed in; as she did so, she stopped with her hand upon the window, for the room was not empty as she had expected to find it; for, standing before her Indian case, was a little, bent old man. So motionless, so much like a relic of a bygone age, so much in keeping with the room and its contents, that by no very great stretch of fancy Kyra might have deemed him another of Percy's curiosities. It was not until she had crossed the room softly and glided up to within reach of him that he heard her.

Then he turned his head abruptly, and as suddenly fell back from her exclaiming in a low, thin voice:

"My God, who are you?"

Kyra started and paused, put out her hand and caught his arm.

"Please forgive me," she said, in her sweet, musical voice. "Do you not know me?"

Stephen Gringe drew away and dropped into a chair, from whence he looked steadily at her, his hands clasped on a crooked stick, his lips working.

"Yes, I know you," he said; "you are the Indian girl."

Kyra nodded.

"I frightened you coming so suddenly."

"Yes, you came suddenly." Then his eyes shot a swift glance. "I have seen you before—in this house—lady."

Kyra flushed, then turned pale.

"Tut," he said, with a gesture of irritation. "Was it for me to betray you? No! At least old Stephen can keep silence—silence. Will you come nearer, lady. I am an old and too favored man. My lord humors me—too much, too much, and I take liberties, you think? No? Then come nearer, lady."

Kyra came close to him, and sat beside him. He moved so that the light fell on her face, then he looked hard at her; then suddenly his scrutiny grew more intense and marked.

His eyes wandered round the room, stopping for an instant at the two portraits, and then back again. At last he murmured:

"You are very beautiful, lady."

Yes, he was right—beautiful.

"Hush," said Kyra, laying her small finger on her lip with a smile: "you must not say that, and who else was so silly as to say it also, pray?"

"Who?" said old Stephen, fixing his eye on her. "Who but the earl himself—ah!" for Kyra's face had brightened into a loveliness almost supernatural, then as suddenly turned pale.

"The earl," she murmured, with lowered eyes and trembling lips, "said that of me—to you."

Old Stephen nodded and bent his birdlike head close to her.

"Aye, aye, to me. Has he never said it to you, child?"

She drew back her head with the exquisite attitude of a startled fawn.

"To me!" she murmured. Then her eyes filled and her head dropped.

Old Stephen nodded.

"He has not. Ah! he is not a wrinkled old man. No; he is too young to tell the truth to one so young and lovely. Is that so? or do you think him old and ugly enough as it is—eh?"

"Lord Percy old—ugly!" she murmured, turning a proud, indignant gaze upon him, then suddenly sinking her eyes beneath the strange, satirical curve of his thin lip.

"Ah!" he said, in a low, grating, and yet piercing tone. "You'd stop the old man's lips forever, for my very word's a libel on your hero—and your god! Hush! Hush! child, have I grown so old as this, and not learned how to read a purple heart like yours? Look at me—listen to me! I have not these white hairs, this wrinkled face, these tottering limbs, in the service of the Verings! I love them better than I love my own flesh and

Halifax, Nova Scotia.—"I am a maternity nurse and have recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to many women who were childless, also to women who need a good tonic. I have one which I keep to lend. I will willingly answer letters from any woman asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. S. M. COLEMAN, 24 Uniacke Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Dublin, Ontario.—"I was weak and irregular, with pains and headaches, and could not sleep nights. I learned about Lydia E. I have got good results from it and I feel a lot stronger and am not troubled with such bad headaches as I used to be and am more regular. blood—my own kin—if I have any. I love this last of them—Percy—my boy—Percy—better than I did any of the dead and gone ones, better than would Lord John, who lived his life beside mine! I would lay down what remains of my life to bring one hour's happiness for Master Percy!—my lord and master! I love the ground he treads on! I only live within the sound of his voice; and I would do anything that man can do to make him happy! Do! Have I not done! Have I not dared! Ah! ah! What have I said! Tut! tut! he broke off suddenly, eying the amazed face before him with suspicious scrutiny.

"But you—you owe him something; they say he saved you from death, and has cared for you up to this very moment with more than a brother's care. Come, lady, you owe him something!" and he bent forward.

"I!" cried Kyra, in her thrilling tones. "I owe him my life, and I would give it to him in this room in sight of these." And she darted in perfect awe toward the snowtained clothes. "I would lay it down, ah! so gladly, to give him a moment's peace and happiness. Oh! if it could only be that I might die for him!" and she strained her clasped hands as she looked up to Heaven.

The old man's face worked, and he hissed in her ear, with sudden energy:

"Child, you love him!"

Kyra's head got to her lap, and she turned a white face upon her assassin, her bosom panting and heaving.

"You love him, I say; and he—hush. What if I tell you how you may make him happy—how you may take off the weight that falls upon him day by day?"

"I," muttered Kyra. "Oh, tell me! tell me!"

"Listen," said the old man with a cunning glance and gesture of caution. "Some one is coming! Ah! ah! my ears are keen, but I've no heart beating like a demon at them. You tremble and shake like a deer caught by the dogs! Go—child. Come to me when the rest are gone or busy, and I'll tell you how to make my lord happy."

As he spoke he waived her toward the window.

She felt that she must obey—something about the old man overwhelmed and awed her. Besides she wanted to be calm, to have time to realize that her clew had been torn from the innermost shrine of her heart, and that the secret, the great truth of her life, only guessed at, wholly feared by her, stood revealed. Yes! It was no sister's no grateful love that lingered peacefully in her bosom, but a love whose fire burned hungrily in her soul and clamored for something to feed on. Her secret kept so closely from all, from herself, was pierced by an old man's sharp eyes and words—and its aspect alarmed and terrified, while it filled her with ecstatic joy.

Oh, to be alone! Alone, away from all, that she might clasp that secret to her soul again, and hide it from all!

She glided through the window and into the shrubbery just as the stable clock chimed half-past four.

CHAPTER XXX.

The Abduction Charge.

While Kyra was wandering to and fro in the shrubbery, endeavoring to realize the discovery which Stephen Gringe had forced up her, wandering carelessly, and vainly striving for composure, the game of cross-purposes was still playing its old contrary way.

The time had arrived when the cup of tea, with which it is the fashion to spoil our digestion before dinner, was to be served out by the fair hands of Lillian Devigne, and Percy and his guests were seated in the drawing-room or lounging at the open windows, talking, laughing, and flirting, and regretting that the little garden party was so near at an end. Charlie and Lady Mary had ensconced themselves in a corner behind a gypsy table and a Japanese screen, and were apparently perfectly indifferent to tea or time. One of the servants, coming up noiselessly, declared down in the servants' hall that he had seen Lady Mary's left hand buried in "Mister Charles's" right; but he was that as it may, they were satisfied with one cup of tea between them, and were utterly neglectful of the bread and butter.

"What a happy day this has been," whispered Charlie. "It's a pity it can't last forever—draw your head back, dearest, Lady Devigne is looking around for us, and it is jolly here, isn't it? All right, she's gone now," he added, with a sigh of relief, as he took the little hand again. "I used to hate these screen things; kept out the fire in the winter and let you tumble over them in the summer; but they're not such useless duffers as I thought. We'll have lots of em in our house, Polly, darling!"

"Our house!" retorted Lady Mary, with a tantalizing move of her laughing lips. "And Polly I won't be called Polly, as if I were a parrot. One would think I had wings!"

"So you have, I'll be sworn, you angel!" murmured Charlie, pressing the little hand.

"You're a goose!" murmured the pouting lips. "Don't, Mr. Merivale, I won't allow it! Oh, Charlie!" for, utterly unable to withstand the temptation, the young rogue bent forward, behind the screen, and kissed the pout away.

PARIS, Oct. 29.—(United Press.)—Mount Everest, highest and only unconquered mountain peak in the world, which has resisted all efforts of climbers and taken a recent toll of death in a gallant British expedition, is to be assailed by Swiss and German mountaineers.

Twenty-five experienced Alpine climbers under the leadership of a Swiss whose name is kept secret will make the attempt next year. The Germans are preparing an expedition under Philip Von Pfeiffer, hoping to take the honors. Expenses of the German venture will be defrayed by public subscription, as it is hoped to make the national manifestation, as the Z-R-3's flight regarded.

The British organizing an expedition of their own, keeping its composition secret, but planning to get the jump in any international race for Everest's summit.

Texas Veteran Recalls Defeat of Arizona Band Of Yelling Apaches

Tells of Battle Fought Forty-two Years Ago When He Was With General Chaffee—Battle Won at Its Critical Stage.

PRISIDIO, Texas, Oct. 23.—Veterans of the Indian wars of Texas and the Southwest have become so scarce with the passing of the years that when one of these old adventurers is found still living the story that he may have to tell is usually regarded as interesting to the present-day generation.

After serving with the United States Army in many campaigns against the Apaches of Arizona and New Mexico Tom Bowen received an honorable discharge and came to this remote spot on the Rio Grande twenty-five years ago and started a little store, which he still runs. He recalled the other day that it was on July 17, just forty-two years ago that he and other soldiers under Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, fought the battle of Big Dry Wash, Ariz., defeating a band of Apaches.

Indians on Warpath.
"General Chaffee and our troops were stationed at Ft. McDowell, about twenty-five miles north of Phoenix, when word was brought to him that a band of 150 Apaches had broken away from their reservation and gone on the warpath. We immediately set out after the Indians," Bowen said. "We made a record of covering thirty-four miles of mountain country in five hours, leaving the trail literally strewn with worn-out horses."

"The Apaches had been warned by signal fires of friendly Indians that Chaffee was after them, and had hurried into the deep canyon known as 'Big Dry Wash.' The Indians outnumbered our band of white troops, their horses were fresh, and their position was almost inaccessible."

"Altho no doubt General Chaffee was well aware of these conditions, on reaching the stronghold of the savages he immediately made preparations to give them battle. He left about one-fourth of his men with the horses in the rear and with the remainder attacked the Indians drawn up on one side of the canyon."

"The battle raged fiercely several hours without decided advantage to superior position of the Indians being either side. At last, however, the gun to tell heavily and Chaffee had all he could do to keep his men properly encouraged, especially when it became apparent that the redskins, far superior in numbers, were beginning a flank movement that threatened to cut off the whites' retreat.

"It was this desperate stage of the battle that General Chaffee, by an act of heroism, inspired his men to new courage. One of his scouts, stationed about fifty feet away, was hit by a bullet.

"He's done for, poor fellow!" exclaimed another scout fighting near his commander.

"Not much," shouted Chaffee above the crack of the musketry. "Come on, let's get him."

"Suiting the action to his words, Chaffee threw himself flat on the ground, and, with the scout wriggling after, crawled over to where the wounded man lay, the Indians shooting as fast as they could at the white.

Dragged Trooper To Safety

"The two men reached the fallen trooper safely and dragged him back to their lines, and when the men stopped firing to cheer the brave act Chaffee ordered them back to their work."

"It was after this incident, when things were going from bad to worse for the white men, that the unexpected happened. Suddenly on the ears of the discouraged and almost exhausted men came the clear notes of a bugle sounding 'Charge!' Looking back, Chaffee and his men saw a sight they never forgot. Running and yelling up the canyon to their support were three troops of cavalry."

"This was too much for the Apaches who were quickly routed when telling volleys were poured into their demoralized gang."

Conditions Unsettled

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 5.—Advice received from Brazil indicate that a revolutionary movement had been planned to begin in Rio Janeiro yesterday, but that aside from the mutiny on board the battleship Sao Paulo, no untoward incidents had occurred up to late last night. The cities of Sao Paulo and Santos were reported quiet. The situation in Rio Janeiro, however, was declared to be very tense according to these advices. The battleship Minas Geraes started in pursuit of the Sao Paulo, but returned to harbor shortly afterwards.

St. John's Mothers Now Just Rub Away Children's Colds

The New Vaporizing Salve Replaces Internal Medicines and Avoids Upsetting Little Stomachs—Relieves Croup in 15 Minutes; Colds Go Overnight.

COLDS are caused by bacteria which usually attack the mucous membrane or lining of the air passages. It has long been recognized that the best way to treat colds is to apply the medication directly to the air passages—to stimulate the mucous membrane to throw off the cold germs.

Internal medication does not reach the air passages directly—only vapors which are inhaled can do that. Until the discovery of Vicks there was no convenient and economical method of furnishing these medicated vapors.

Old Remedies in New Form

Vicks is the discovery of a chemist who found a new way to combine in ointment form the best known remedies for colds—Menthol, Camphor, Oils of Eucalyptus, Thyme, Juniper Tar, etc.—so that when applied to the throat and chest the body heat releases the ingredients in the form of vapors.

These vapors, inhaled with every breath all night long, carry the medication directly to the air passages and lungs.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster, taking out the soreness and tightness in the chest.

Ideal for Children.

Vicks is particularly valuable to mothers with small children, since it avoids the necessity of that frequent internal dosing which so often upsets the delicate digestive organs of children.

Vicks can be applied freely and often. It contains no harmful ingredients. Used immediately after exposure it helps to prevent children's colds. Applied at bedtime it is a safeguard against croup.

In the column adjoining are given the actual experiences of a number of St. John's families who have adopted the use of Vicks since it was introduced here last winter.

The Direct Treatment

St. John's mothers have found in Vicks what they have always wanted—an "outside" remedy for children's croup and colds—brings quick relief.

Vicks has met severe tests in these St. John's homes

CHILDREN'S COLDS

Mrs. Jos. Power, No. 16 George Street, says: "I have two boys, eleven and twelve years old, who had very bad colds and sore throats. I rubbed Vicks on their chests at night, before going to bed, and it did them so much good I told several of my friends about it."

HEAD AND CHEST COLDS

Mrs. A. J. Symonds of No. 102 Barnes Road writes: "Since trying the sample of Vicks I have been a constant user and find it a wonderful remedy. My four months old baby had a bad head and chest cold and, after three applications, he was completely cured."

SORE THROAT

Remembrance Day

On Saturday of this week the sale of Flanders Poppies will take place in the city and outports, in aid of the G. W. V. A. Relief Fund. It is hoped that the response in aid of this worthy object will be as great, if not greater, than in the past, and that sufficient funds will be collected to take care of the needy cases during the coming winter.

The men who went "over there," and offered their all, some of whom are now unable to help themselves, are looking to us to help them, and we have no hesitation in saying that they will not be disappointed.

The Unusual Mr. Ford

The wizard, who in the Prince's presence is said to have, in eleven minutes, as with a wave of his wand, produced out of countless parts a splendid chariot which the Prince could mount and drive, continues to add to his reputation as a remarkably unusual character. He has withdrawn his offer to acquire from the American government the huge water power developments "the Muscle Shoals." These immense works were partly completed by the government during the war and intended for the production of nitrates and other necessary chemicals on a gigantic scale. Cities, railways, huge factories as well as the enormous dams were included in the development. After the war the work stopped and the entire scheme was abandoned. For over three years the works were considered a white elephant on the hands of the government. Situated on the Tennessee river in northern Alabama, southerners were vitally interested in the completion of the work. They made strenuous efforts to interest capitalists in taking over the project. As a last hope a representative interviewed Henry Ford. The motor car king rushed for the next train. In a few weeks he made a gigantic cash offer to acquire the development for one hundred years. The American legislators have been considering his offer for two years. President Coolidge favors its acceptance; Cynics said Mr. Ford withdrew as a presidential candidate on that account. The offer was to have been dealt with immediately at the next meeting of Congress. Now Mr. Ford cancels his offer. There is consternation in Tennessee and dismay in Washington. Productive business cannot wait for two years for a decision that requires only one week, says the auto magnate. He proposes to substitute a mammoth electrical development scheme at his recently acquired coal fields in Kentucky. Henry Ford has a genius for shocking people. He is one of the world's richest men—yet a bitter enemy of Wall Street. He favors the substitution for the gold basis of money, a currency based on annual crop values. Tightly pressed by Jewish bankers, he acquired the Dearborn Independent primarily to fight the Jew. He asserts that the city as an institution is doomed, claiming that factory production is destined to take place in smaller, healthier communities, and that coming transportation facilities and congestion will render the city impossible. He antagonizes the medical profession by establishing a hospital on a one-charge for all basis. He refuses to give charity but employs thousands of disabled men, unable to get work elsewhere. Mr. Ford openly defends the Ku Klux Klan. A noted democrat, he nevertheless monopolizes royalty. The author of the famous peace expedition, he now claims that in the event of another European war America should go in at once and "clean up the whole bunch." Truly, the unusual Mr. Ford.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOHN GUSHUE

O what were life, if death were all? Thine eyes are blinded by heir tears, or thou would'st see

Thy treasures wait thee in the far-off skies, And Death, thy friend, will give them all to thee.

On the 21st of September the Angel of Death entered the home of John Gushue and called his beloved wife (nee Miss Bride Hawco, of Chapel's Cove), to her eternal reward.

Mrs. Gushue was much beloved by her friends and neighbors alike, for many estimable qualities of mind and heart, and always had a cheerful smile for all with whom she came in contact. Her death leaves a sad vacancy in the home where the family mourn the loss of a loving mother and devoted wife.

Mrs. Gushue's death came somewhat suddenly and unexpected for she had just recovered from a serious illness, and all her friends expected that she was on the high road to recovery, but the unlooked for happened and in spite of expert medical skill and all the loving tenderness that kind neighbors could bestow, she passed peacefully away to the home of eternal bliss, after having received the rites and consolations of Holy Mother Church. The funeral took place on Sept. 23rd and a large concourse of friends attended, bearing silent testimony to the high esteem entertained for the deceased.

A solemn requiem mass was celebrated for the repose of her soul, after which the remains were conveyed to the cemetery on the hill and all that was mortal of "Bride" (as she was familiarly called), was consigned to mother earth, there to await the last call.

A sad feature in the connection with the death of Mrs. Gushue was the absence of her husband who was then working in the U.S.A. When her illness took a serious turn, Mr. Gushue was wired for immediately and quickly responded to the call, but did not arrive until four days after his wife had been buried. Although the shock was a severe one, but he bore it with Christian fortitude and resignation.

Besides her husband and four little children, (one an infant), and the eldest five years old, Mrs. Gushue leaves to mourn her loss her father, and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hawco of Chapel's Cove; also five brothers, James, Thomas and Bernard, who are in America; Michael, residing at home and William at St. Bonaventure's College, and two sisters, Annie and Maria also in America. To all of whom we extend our sincere sympathy.

May her soul rest in peace this All Souls' night is the fervent prayer of
A FRIEND,
Bacon Cove, Nov. 2nd, 1924.

Seals Wonderful Noses

TRAP DOORS THAT KEEP OUT SAND AND WATER

Most of us when we go in for diving have the very unpleasant experience of getting our nostrils full of water. Nature did not design man to be a diving animal, otherwise she would have been as clever with his nose as she has been with the seal's.

The seal is, without doubt, the cleverest diver in the animal world, and his nose is a very ingenious contrivance indeed. Each nostril is provided with muscles which close it hermetically to the owner's will. And the shape of the nose is such that when the nostrils are closed not a drop of water can enter.

TERRIBLE DUST STORMS

With seals the closing of the nostrils at the moment of diving has become an automatic process.

This is wonderful enough, but we can see a still more remarkable application of the same principle in an animal as far removed from the seal as chalk is from cheese.

The seal is a water animal. The other owner of trap door nostrils is the camel, an inhabitant of the driest parts of the world, the waterless, sandy deserts.

Now why should the camel require such an apparatus? He is not troubled with water, but he is troubled with dust; not the dust that we see in his country, but the fierce, blinding dust storms of the desert.

These are so violent that tiny particles are driven into the works of even the most finely-made watch, which becomes at once clogged and useless. If the camel had not nostrils which were perfectly dust tight, he could never endure the dreadful sand and dust storms.

Where Black Men Rule

Lady Dorothy Mills, the well known English traveller and writer, gives the following interesting account of a recent visit to the Black Republic.

My motive in visiting the Haitians was the comparatively modest one of studying civilized negro mentality, sociology, and general development, and, as a side issue, to find out what remains of the sinister "Voodoo," and old, semi-occult religion handed down from their African ancestry.

Haiti is the only negro republic in the world that has attained, through its own efforts, a quite degree of culture and civilization, built up since early in 1900 when the Haitian negroes, slaves successively of the Spanish and the French, ejected the white men from the island and started a little kingdom of their own.

When I disembarked from a little Dutch cargo boat at the capital, Port au Prince, I imagined myself to be utterly unheard of and unknown. My disillusionment was rapid. Extracts from the English and United States papers, lurid and misleading, had preceded me, representing me as an eccentric and a seeker after sensation, a "man-woman" with a gun in one hand and a vitriolic style in the other! A complete dossier had been prepared about me and the Haitian newspapers overflowed with wrath.

It took me a week to live down my imaginary self. All day, in the little hotel where I lodged, I received and talked with Haitians of every color, from ebony black to pale cafe au lait, of every class and profession. When I went out crowds followed and stared at me, and tried to get a few words of conversation. At the end of a week they had made up their minds that I was a nice, normal, friendly creature, and I was overwhelmed with hospitality and invitations of every kind.

VISIT TO THE PRESIDENT

The President, Monsieur Borno, having expressed a wish to meet me, I visited him one afternoon at his country house up in the hills. Quadron in coloring, immaculately dressed in white the linen of the tropics, speaking perfect French, he was a singularly charming man, with most courteous manners.

It was not long before I was deep in the vortex of the social life of Port au Prince, and very pleasant I found it. I was surprised at its cultivation and refinement, though it at first seemed strange to be living entirely among black or parti-colored people, where the sight of one's own white face was an incongruity, one simply lost one's color sense after a time.

In their homes, their social clubs, and their games, the Haitians absolutely resembled any little white community. Their ideals being based on their memories of the French, their social code and manner of living reminded me of those of any small French town.

The married women were gentle, home keeping souls, beautifully mannered, and well-dressed. The young girls, like girls all the world over, had a slight tendency, deplored by their parents, to be "modern," to demand greater freedom and education, to play games. Some of them were really lovely, especially the Mulattoes, with their gorgeous eyes and skins like old amber.

LAUGHTER LOVING PEOPLE

Many of them have been educated in Paris, and had quick, intuitive brains, and a keen appreciation of beauty and art in every form. Like all negroes, they were laughter-loving and fond of a joke

Young Teeth

A tooth is as old as it looks and feels.

Tooth-cleaning methods have something to do with the age of teeth. Harsh, gritty dentifrices can shorten their life by scratching the enamel.

Colgate's cleans teeth the right way—washes and polishes—doesn't scratch or scour. The regular use of Colgate's assures you clean teeth and a wholesome mouth.

Brush your teeth twice a day—
See your dentist twice a year.

COLGATE & CO., LIMITED
72 St. Ambrose St., Montreal, Canada

Among the upper classes the predominant shades of coloring range from mulatto to pale tan—a result of the white blood bequeathed them by their old French masters. A full blooded negro may rise in the world by force of his own brains, but normally the pale skin takes first place in the social hierarchy.

They were all extremely anxious to know my opinions and impressions of themselves and their country, and to know if I could trace any resemblance between them and their compatriots in Africa.

Their great recreation is dancing, and they were delighted when they found that I, too, loved to dance and when, to return for their favorite dance, the Meringue, I taught them the Blues.

AT A VOODOO CEREMONY

Dancing has always been the love of the negro heart, and any night, along the rough roads that ran into the country, one might come across groups of ebony black, scantily-clad peasants stamping and whirling by the light of a flickering lantern, to the music of a tom-tom.

Once, in the heart of the mountains, I saw a "Voodoo" dance, a religious ceremony accompanied by the killing of a white cock and a small pig. But civilization and Christianity have stamped out idolatry and the grosser superstitions, and the once sinister and mysterious "Voodoo," is now little but an empty husk, a ceremonial that has lost most of its old meaning.

It was with regret that I left Haiti, carrying with me memories of a kindly, cultured, and warmhearted people, who did much to disabuse me of the accepted Anglo-Saxon prejudice based, somewhat summarily, on a mere skin pigment. I carried with me, too, a realization of the growing significance of this little cradle of a black civilization.

Using Camels As Cradles

All was bustle and excitement in our little frontier station in the far north of British East Africa. We were going on leave and the camels were being loaded for our departure, writes F. T. B., in a London paper.

Neither we nor our men were unused to these journeys over the desert, for, indeed, our time had mostly been spent in patrolling its edges and in chasing raiders from Abyssinia, but this was a special journey, and a long one.

We were going home, and all our Lares and Penates had to go too. Not less excited than ourselves, was our faithful Somali orderly, Jama, who also was going on leave, and who, though possessed of less baggage, had a wife and baby to take with him.

The safari was nearly ready, and there remained only our crockery and last solitary bottle of whiskey to be loaded up. They were to be put on a quiet camel, with no tendency towards skittishness, who could be trusted not to pitch them off.

Alas, man proposed, but this camel disposed of the whiskey and all our glasses, by jumping up before the boy had been secured, and depositing it on an adjacent rock.

Nothing but lukewarm water or tea for us now, and that out of a tin mug. We started, with Jama riding behind us. Mrs. Jama was on foot, leading two camels, which carried not only the Jama furniture and baby, but their house as well.

The house, when standing, was rather rudimentary, consisting of merely hides and mats laid over a flimsy framework of curved sticks, and looked like the half of a rather large football. These sticks are scarce in desert country, so they were fastened in two bundles, like tusks, on each side of the leading camel.

PUT IN A LITTLE NEST

The roofing made convenient pads for the saddle. Mr. Somali knowing how to economise weight on Safari, and he lives on the move.

The baby was put in a little nest on top of the camel, and an ox hide was fastened over it to keep off the sun.

All went well for a day or so. Mrs. Jama continued placidly to lead her camels, and the baby signified its appreciation of the care which was being taken of it by sleeping most of the time.

On the fourth day, however, it got the shock of its life.

The camels were being loaded up, and Mrs. Jama had loaded her two, installed the baby, and was waiting a little way off, for the other to go.

Suddenly two camels took fright; presumably at a pony, behind whom they had walked every day, but whom, on this occasion, they conceived a most violent and unexpected dislike.

It, poor thing, had merely been trying to catch a fly, but that was enough for the camels, and they started. The baby's camel leaped high into the air, and knocked Mistress Gai-gallo rolling into the sand.

It was eventually pulled down to its knees with some difficulty, to be sure, and what we feared was the mangled corpse of the baby, picked up. However, a miracle had happened, and although we cannot truthfully say it was a smiling baby, for it was a decidedly howling one, yet it had escaped nothing but the camel's feet, and had received nothing worse than a bump on its forehead.

SEAR AS A SOUVENIR

We, ourselves, were much less fortunate in the fray, for when pulling down the camel, the sharp ends of the house's framework took us in the ribs, and we will carry a nice little sear as a souvenir.

By this time, and it had not taken long, Jama himself had arrived, and after exhausting his vocabulary of his choicest anathema, which completely embraced not only the camel, but also its ancestry and possible descendants and those of its owner likewise, he calmly loaded it up again and restored his son and heir to his place on top.

On our inquiring as to whether he was not afraid that the accident might re-occur with less fortunate results to the baby, he replied: "Oh, no! It is as Allah wills."

It was a wonderful example of "Kismet" in Africa, and during the remaining days of the journey we never ceased from marvelling at the firm belief which the African has in predestination, and that "what is to be, will be."

In conclusion, we might say that the baby was predestined to arrive safely at its journey's end, for it did.

Eight Lions In Eight Shots

Mr. Gerald P. Stevens, an English barrister, who has practised his profession at Singapore and West South and East Africa, and who has been Mayor of Nairobi, relates this amazing adventure with lions in East Africa.

In 1913, Postma, a young Dutchman was travelling by night with an empty wagon and sixteen oxen. "Without being aware of the fact, he was being followed for quite a long time just before daybreak by a large family of nine lions, father, mother, and seven nearly full grown cubs."

No sooner had he outspanned the oxen and they were busy grazing near the wagon, when down came the troop of lions, and in less time than it takes to write these lines, they set on to the leading ox, pulled him down killed him, and commenced their early breakfast.

Postma was alone except for the two natives. Walking to the wagon, he took down his small sporting Lee-Medford from its peg and quietly approached the lions till near enough to shoot with accuracy.

The lions were too busy to take the least notice of him, and one by one, as they sat on the dead ox, eating his buttock he drew a bead on each of them in turn and each one rolled over stone dead, with a bullet through his vitals, the strangest thing of all the rest took no notice and went on eating—which seems the most extraordinary part of the venture.

In this way, in as many minutes, he killed seven of the lions with one shot each; the eight was badly wounded and was picked up dead next day, and the old lion of the party decamped unhurt before Postma could get him.

Mr. Stevens goes on to say: "Postma told me all the facts himself soon after he came to see me on business

Remembrance Day, 1924

THE CALL

In Flanders fields the poppies blow
Between the crosses, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the sky
The larks, still bravely singing,
Fly
Scarce heard amid the guns below.
We are the dead. Short days ago
We lived, felt dawn saw sunset glow,
Loved and were loved, and now
We lie
In Flanders fields.

Take up our quarrel with the foe;
To you from falling hands we throw
The torch; be yours to hold it high;
If ye break faith with us who die,
We shall not sleep though poppies grow,
In Flanders fields.
—John McCrae.

Poppy Day is drawing near and we turn aside for a moment to reflect seriously on the grave responsibility which we must accept and on the duty we owe to the dependents of our gallant boys who faced death for our protection. It is the day when the Call goes out to the public for assistance to relieve the distress among those of our men who can no longer support their families and the newspapers present for general information the particulars of what has been accomplished as a result of the wholehearted response from a grateful public on Remembrance Day, 1923.
Now we are coming to another Remembrance Day and those who rest beneath the Poppies of Flanders are calling to us in the spirit to keep faith with them. We have a pledge to keep—a solemn responsibility to assume—that of relieving our distressed comrades and in a practical way to radiate sunshine into sad hearts where the breadwinner is handicapped by ill health and where warmth and food is needed to nourish the frail bodies of children whose father sacrificed his health for King and Country. We feel that as Poppy Day approaches, the spirit which animated our people in the past, will again respond to the Call of those who gave up their opportunities, offered their lives on the altar of sacrifice in order that our Empire could be saved, our children and women folk protected and the world made safe for Democracy.
Let us never fall in our duty to help those who did so much to help us.

THE ANSWER

The Victory Emblem
Oh! you who sleep in Flanders fields,
Sleep sweet—to rise anew;
We caught the torch you threw,
And holding high we kept
The faith with those who died.
We cherish, too, the poppy red,
That grows on fields where valor led,
It seems to signal to the skies,
That blood of heroes never dies,
But lends a cluster to the red
Of the flower that blooms above the dead
In Flanders fields.
And now the torch and poppy red
Wear in honour of our dead,
Fear not that ye have died for naught;
We've learned the lesson that ye taught
In Flanders fields.
—M. Michael.

Political Changes At Rhode Island

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 5.—Sweeping changes in the political complexion of the state legislature followed yesterday's election in Rhode Island. Aram J. Boitner, named by the G.P.O. to combat the candidacy of Lieut Governor Toupin, the stormy petrel of Rhode Island politics, who aspired to the gubernatorial chair, defeated his opponent by more than 1,000 votes, and B. W. Smith swamped Robert E. Quinn who sought to carry on as Toupin's successor in the President's chair of the Rhode Island senate. The strong democratic minority in the state is wiped out by yesterday's election and their number in the House is also greatly reduced.

Who Wins?

BOSTON, Nov. 5.—James M. Curley Mayor of Boston, and Democratic candidate for Governor, was trailing his Republican opponent, Alvin T. Fuller, by over 130,000 votes early today with 1013 precincts out of 1158 counted. The vote stood, Curley, 300,056; Fuller, 464,325.

At The Fair

The third day of the Industrial Fair has passed. Yesterday and last night saw thousands of visitors viewing the different exhibits.

At the Booth of Messrs Ayre & Sons, where a beautiful piano is exhibited, is a lady, who will play any sheet of music asked for by the visitors.

The "Oxo" and "Fry" girls in Messrs. T. A. McNab's booth are doing much business. The booth of Messrs. J. B. Mitchell has now been laid out in cabaret style and the visitors are invited in to get a sample of Golden Pheasant tea, and Wilson's Certified Bacon and many avails of the opportunity. Messrs. James Baird's stall is one of the prettiest in the rink and attracts much attention. The lighting of the booth is a special feature. Today this firm will change their exhibit and will show an entirely new line of goods. In connection with their display of cement, Messrs. Bowring Brothers are now showing a model of a concrete bridge which has been built in this country. In their grocery department they are exhibiting bread and cakes made by "Our Own" Bakery in this city, and also serving teas with the baking. Many visitors have availed of the opportunity offered.

In the Curling rink there is now an exhibit of coal, taken from the St. George's Coal Fields, and this attracted much attention. Yesterday afternoon His Grace the Archbishop, accompanied by Rev. Fr. Flynn, visited the exhibition and was received by Mr. McKay who accompanied His Grace to the different booths.

This afternoon the orchestra of the Young-Adams Co. will be present from three to five o'clock.

Made Famous By a Joke

"STARS" WHO WON SUCCESS BY CHANCE.

"All tickets ready, please!"
As the familiar request rang out at one of the London Underground stations, Mr. "Pony" Moore, of the Moore and Burgess Minstrels, stopped, and going up to the ticket examiner, engaged him on the spot for his company. As Mr. Moore had instantly judged, the man was the owner of a fine voice.

A famous cellist achieved eminence on his first appearance on the concert platform, which he reached owing to the fortunate circumstance that a manager heard him playing for a while in the street.

The Understudy's Opportunity
Many artistes have become "stars" in a night or two through acting as substitutes. Duse was an instance. After appearing for years without attaining distinction, she was, in Turin, asked at a moment's notice to take the place of Italy's leading actress in "Therese Raquin." She did so, and achieved immediate success.

It is the possibility of getting to the top of the ladder with equal expedition that makes many understudies anxious about the health of their principals, though sometimes they have to wait a long time for their chance. A well-known leading lady understudied a certain "star" for nearly a year before she was called upon, and then got her opportunity because the "star" after arriving at the theatre, had attacked almond rock with such vigour that she had broken her artificial teeth!

The World's Greatest Tenor

Many actors and actresses, in their days of obscurity, are able to sing without being aware of their ability. A case in point is that of the new tenor, Mr. Alfred Piecaver, who was born at Long Sutton, Lincolnshire. While working in Mr. Edison's laboratories, he met with an accident and was sent to Europe to recover his health. In Austria he went to an audition with some friends who wanted an engagement. After they had sung, they peculiarly suggested that he, too, should sing, and entering into the spirit of the joke, he complied. To his great amazement, they flocked round him, declaring enthusiastically that he was a born singer. He then thought that the joke had gone too far; but they declared they were serious, and a week later he appeared at the Prague Opera House.

Mr. Joseph Hislop, one of the successes of the Italian grand opera season, was also "discovered" abroad. A Scotsman, he went to Sweden to take up a business appointment. While there somebody heard him sing, and strongly advised him to develop his vocal talent. He did so, with the result that he is now described by some judges as the "world's greatest tenor."

AT REST

The funeral of the late Miss Irene Kennedy took place yesterday afternoon and was very largely attended. Amongst those present were several priests from the outports and he city. At the entrance to the Cathedral, the pupils of St. Bonaventure's College formed a guard of honor through which the funeral procession passed. Mrs. N. B. McGuire was also buried yesterday afternoon, and this funeral was also attended by a large number of mourners.

The late Miss Dwyer was also laid to rest yesterday.

At the R.C. Cathedral the burial service was read by Rt. Rev. Monsignor McDermott, who was assisted by Rev. Dr. Carter and Fathers Flynn, P. J. Kennedy and McGettigan.

In all cases interment was at Belvedere Cemetery.

OBITUARY

CATHERINE POWER

A member of one of the oldest West End families, in the person of Miss Catherine Power, passed to her reward on Tuesday morning. She had been ill some time, and though her passing was not unexpected it comes as a severe blow to the numerous friends she won by a life time of kindness and good works. She was a sister of the late Robert Power, Customs Broker, and is survived by one sister, Mrs. William Morrissey, of Boston. The funeral takes place at 2.30 this afternoon from her late residence 128 Military Road.

A Destructive Fire

About 7.50 last evening an alarm from Box 25 brought the East End and Central Fire Companies to Henry Street, where a fire was in progress in the residence of Mr. T. Downey. The fire having gained much headway, five streams of water were brought to bear and the blaze confined to the Downey residence and shop.

The fire was discovered in a bedroom on the second flat by Miss Margaret Downey, who with ten other members of the family, was in the house. By the time the alarm could be given the third storey was ablaze, so rapidly did the fire spread. At the time Mr. and Mrs. Downey were in a story on New Gower Street and the first intimation they had was when a youngster rushed in and told him his house was on fire. By the time he reached the scene the house and store had been gutted.

The origin of the fire is unknown though Mr. Downey thinks it may have been caused by defective wiring, the fire having originated in an upstairs room. The only insurance carried was $1,000 with the Queen Fire Insurance Company. This is the third fire to occur at the Downey residence in about four months.

The quick response and the manner in which the firemen worked, saved what otherwise would undoubtedly have been a serious conflagration.

Marjie Adams Plays Wonderful Role

In the Great Emotional Play
"East Lynne".

The Young-Adams Company gave one of the most wonderful presentations of "East Lynne" ever offered, and last night's audience at the Casino were indeed enthusiastic in their appreciation. Marjie Adams as Lady Isabel and Madam Vine excellently herself. Her wonderful emotional acting in this bill will not soon be forgotten. In the first part of the performance Miss Adams had ample opportunity of displaying some of her handsome wardrobe H. Wilmot Young gives a dignified performance as Richard Carlyle, and he fulfills a preconceived idea of the man; his enunciation and appearance greatly enhances the role Sir Francis Levison who is impersonated by Alfred Stretton is a convincing heavy, and he played the part with much emphasis. Marguerite Young was all at home in the role of Barbara Hare. Mr. Edward H. Stauffer ably sustained the character John Dill providing some of the humorous situations. Edgar Harris Jason as Lord Severn and Harry W. Young as Richard Hare were particularly good in their respective roles. Little Eleanor O'Keefe of the city appeared as Willie and gave an excellent performance, which reflects great credit to the talents of this local star. Maybell Leverton as Joyce and Ann McNeil as Cornelia Carlyle did full justice to these roles. The production is a combination that disarms criticism and should be seen by all lovers of stage drama.

The vaudeville in itself was a distinct feature, particularly the comedy act by The Durands who nearly brought down the house. These people become more and more popular at each appearance. The Saturday matinee this week will be "S'Manthy" for which tickets are now selling at Hutton's. You will witness the big sensation and enjoy a wonderful laugh when you take in "Spooks" tomorrow night. On Monday and Tuesday nights of next week "The Road to Ruin" will be presented, a play which is written for men and women only, when those under eighteen years of age will not be admitted. Watch for this beautiful production.

Largest Plurality In History

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The full meapolls could not yet be taken to-night, but the returns tended to show that President Coolidge would have at least a hundred votes to spare in the electoral college and the largest plurality in history. The showing made by John W. Davis remained unchanged throughout the day and although Senator La Follette began to creep up a little in one or two western states, there was no certainty to-night that he would receive the electoral vote of any state group except that the Wisconsin. On the face of the day's Congressional returns the Republicans made certain of a paper majority at least in both Senate and House, but doubt remained whether the margin would be great enough to give the administration the whip hand over the combined opposition of the Democrats and the LaFollette block.
